Saving lives together

Volunteer Role	Patient Transport Driver
Responsible to	Ayr Hospital Patient Transport Coordinator
Where (Location)	Ayrshire and Arran
Time commitment	Regular & committed
Volunteer role description	As a Patient Transport Driver, it will be your role to transport renal patients to and from the renal unit at The University Hospital, Dalmellington Road, Ayr, KA6 6DX. This service is completely free to patients. Drivers will need access to their own car and all vehicles and drivers require full insurance. St John Scotland works in partnership with the Scottish Ambulance Service and local NHS boards to provide Patient Transport for people attending oncology and renal clinics. All passengers are referred to us by the Scottish Ambulance Service or NHS clinics. St John Scotland currently operates Patient Transport services in six areas of Scotland. We are keen to expand the service and are in discussions with NHS Ayrshire and Arran about establishing a renal dialysis PT service in Ayr and the surrounding areas. Dialysis requires regular treatment, three times a week, often for long periods of time. Patients currently use a mixture of transport to get to their treatments, including ambulance transport, self-transport, taxis and other voluntary services. The support provided by St John Scotland's Patient Transport service means patients have access to free, friendly, reliable transport and the support of volunteers, while our model provides a significant financial saving for the NHS.
